

Preface and Acknowledgments

The editors are extremely grateful to the scholars who came to the Ancient Roman Toilet Workshop, organized by us and held both at the Royal Dutch Institute in Rome and at the American Academy in Rome, from June 23-25, 2007. Not everyone who came to the 2007 workshop in Rome was able to write something for this book, but there were some who contributed greatly in other ways, especially to the lively debates and discussions we had, and we wish to acknowledge them here with our gratitude: Mark Bradley, Valerie Curtis, Anne Hervé-Moretti, Manfred Horstmanshoff, Hubertus Manderscheid, Loes L. Raimond-Waarts, and Gilbert Wiplinger. On the other hand, some people were not able to come to the workshop, but they later learned about the project and submitted chapters or sections of chapters. In the end we had a large group of contributors from several different countries and continents and without their strong intellectual commitment at the workshop itself and to the subsequent research and preparation of their submissions on the wide variety of topics represented here, we could never have achieved the high level of collaboration and cohesiveness evident in these pages.

In addition, we wish to thank most warmly the Royal Dutch Institute in Rome for the use of their facilities and for much generous hospitality during the first two days of our workshop. We enjoyed comfortable accommodation, the fine library, the lovely landscape, and excellent discussion rooms. We are particularly grateful to interim director, dr. Gert Jan Burgers, and to Janet Mente, head librarian. Likewise, the staff at the American Academy in Rome, most especially Professor Thomas A.J. McGinn, then the Andrew W. Mellon Professor-in-Charge of the School of Classical Studies, warmly welcomed us, offered us a hearty lunch, gave us free reign of the gardens, and provided a fine conference room for our deliberations. We are also grateful to various members of the Department of Classics at Radboud University in Nijmegen, The Netherlands, and to the editorial staff at BABESCH who assisted us in improving the manuscript.
